

173d Airborne Brigade

You lead the way...

Now pave the way for future generations!

The 173d Airborne Brigade has a rich history that stands out from all the rest. From its initial activation in 1963 to the present day, the 173d continues to lead the way.

The National Infantry Museum and Soldier Center is dedicated to honoring Soldiers past, present, and future. One of the most visible ways the Museum honors service members and their families is through the Heritage Walk Paver Program.

In honor of the 173d monument dedication ceremony on June 1, 2010, the National Infantry Museum would like to dedicate a section of the Heritage Walk Pavers to the 173d Airborne Brigade. You can purchase an individual paver recognizing yourself or others for their service and have it placed on Heritage Walk which leads to the 173d monument.

Your section will be designated with a paver donated by the National Infantry Foundation in honor of the 173d Airborne Brigade. Please consider being part of this special program!

Heritage Walk is located directly to the left of the National Infantry Museum and Soldier Center.

2,500 pavers currently line Heritage Walk.

Each section of pavers is comprised of 178 pavers dedicated to service members or their families.
